The following questions refer to information that you have provided to MESA about where you live, and about the places where you have lived in the past. We are asking you these questions to study if characteristics of the places where people have lived (such as air pollution) are related to heart disease or stroke. Using information on where people live, together with information on air pollution levels, we will be able to determine if people exposed to higher levels of pollution have more disease. This information will be kept strictly confidential.
